Education/Civil Rights/Bullying Letter

In a 10-page letter to schools, colleges and universities, Russlynn Ali, Assistant Secretary for Civil Rights at the Department of Education (ED), advised that bullying may violate students' civil rights. The letter outlined the legal obligations that school staff has to protect students from peer harassment based on race, color, national origin, sex or disability. Secretary Ali reminded schools that Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as well as the Americans with Disabilities Act, prohibit discrimination based on disability status. In August of this year, the Obama Administration hosted the first ever National Bullying Summit and launched the Stop Bulling Now campaign, a national database of effective anti-bullying programs (see: www.bullyinginfo.org) To read a copy of the letter, go to:

The Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program helps low-income families pay their heating bills. LIHEAP is a grant. You do not have to repay it. The grant amount is determined by household size and income; the minimum grant is $300.00, the maximum grant is $1,000.00.

To receive help:

You don't have to be on public assistance
You don't need to have an unpaid heating bill
You can either rent or own your home

Important Information for CRP Customers Who Are Applying for LIHEAP:

PGW will apply the LIHEAP grant directly to the "Please Pay" amount for CRP customers. This means that a LIHEAP grant will lower your bill because it will reduce the amount you are asked to pay.

More Information

To hear additional, pre-recorded information and updates to the LIHEAP program, please call the PGW LIHEAP Hotline at (215) 684-6100.

Teen pregnancy is a major issue that many of our communities face.

Here are the facts:

The U.S. has the highest teen pregnancy rate in the industrialized world – twice as high as in England or Canada.

2006 saw the first rise in the U.S. teen pregnancy rate in 15 years.

An estimated 750,000 teens will become pregnant this year.

- About 1 in 3 women become pregnant at least once before they're 20.
- A sexually active teen girl who does not use contraceptives has a 90% chance of becoming pregnant within a year.
- It affects education - only a third of teen mothers earn their high school diploma. And only 1.5% has a college degree by age 30.

"The impossible is often untried." - Author Unknown

JOIN THE COALITION, INC!

To join The Coalition go to:

TheCoalitionInc.net and download a copy of the Pledge of Commitment and return it to us the.pa.coalition@gmail.com

- It also affects their kids - girls born to teen mothers are more likely to be teen mothers themselves. Boys born to teen moms are more likely to end up in prison.
- 75% of girls and over half of boys report that girls who have sex do so because their boyfriends want them to.
- 8 in 10 girls and 6 in 10 boys say they wish they had waited until they were older to have sex. Most teens (6 in 10) and adults (3 in 4) believe that teen boys often receive the message that they are "expected to have sex."

Diapers are expensive, but it's nothing compared to the $9 billion that teen pregnancy costs the United States each year. This includes increased spending in child welfare costs and public sector health care.

To address these issues, on the www.cap4kids.org/philadelphia website, under Pregnancy and Infant Resources, there is a section on Teen Pregnancy resources including the ELECT Teen CPC centers with a newly posted referral sheet, fact sheet (see attached), and Middle Years and MARS programs. http://www.cap4kids.org/philadelphia/parent_handouts/pregnancy_resources_and_infants.html

Please become familiar with these resources and refer families and teens in need.

Police Brutality from Oakland to Philadelphia

All entries for submission should be received by noon, the Monday prior to publish date and in Press Release form.

Featuring Film Showing: OPERATION SMALL AXE

& Panel Discussion with Executive Producer – JR

Tues. December 14 at 7pm.

“Operation Small Axe” takes a raw and unflinching look at life under police terrorism in Oakland, drawing parallels with the struggles against oppression in Palestine and South Africa. Through the stories of Oscar Grant and Lovelle Mixon, the film focuses on the occupation of Oakland’s communities of color by militarized and racist police forces.

Oscar Grant was shot in the back and killed by Bay Area Rapid Transit police officer Johannes Mehserle on Jan. 1 of this year. On March 21, Lovelle Mixon was killed by Oakland police after having allegedly shot five OPD officers, killing four. Mehserle was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter, and on Nov. 5 sentenced to two years, minus time served. The film, now debuting to rave reviews around the Bay Area, is directed

The war waged daily on the streets of Black and Brown Oakland by the police against the people is no different from the one right here in Philadelphia. HEALTH MATTERS

Shed pounds... develop a fine physique... look ten years younger.... IN JUST ONE MINUTE!!!

OK you're not going to fall for it. These 'get-fit-quick' health claims are a tad outrageous. But not if we're talking IMPROVED POSTURE. Your posture is something you can dramatically enhance right now.

We spend hours agonizing over bulges, dimples, pounds, and pimples - yet ignore the dramatic results for health and appearance of an improved posture.

Think about the position you are in at the moment as you read this note. Are you sitting hunched over the key-board with your neck straining forward at the screen? Is your lower back curled up like a frightened armadillo?

I bet we can fix your posture in a few seconds. Try this:

Push your behind into the back of the seat. If you have a good seat the curve of the backrest should support your lower back. Next unroll your shoulders and drop them into a relaxed, square position. Lean your upper body forward so your center of gravity is squarely above your hips. Your fingers should comfortably touch the keyboard with elbows bent at 90 degrees.

Now tell me you haven't gained two inches in height, lost four around the middle and relieved some of the tension in your neck and lower back!

Your key to freedom lies in your power to control your thoughts. - Unknown

I have a friend who I have always thought of as short - well shorter than me at any rate. One evening I betrayed this perception in idle conversation - upon which I was challenged to a 'back-to-back' dual. You can image my surprise when he in fact turned out to be over an inch taller than me. This fellow had unrolled himself from a chronic slouch. He suddenly affected an image that was remarkably taller and slimmer. It was obvious to everyone present: he looked great!

Your spine is comprised of three parts, corresponding to three natural curves:

- * The neck, or cervical, region curves naturally inwards to a small degree.
- * The upper back, or thoracic region, curves outwards slightly.
- * The lower back, or lumbar region, curves inwards, but more gradually than the cervical curve.

These natural curves should be maintained both in movement and while sitting or standing still. Also, your body is not meant to stay stationary for too long without the muscles starting to spasm. In work or while devoting time to hobbies, or just watching TV, stand up and move around from time to time to relieve stiffness.

The ideal posture, as well as various poor postures are described at: <http://www.chiropractic.org/consumerInfo/Posture.htm>

Poor posture can come about in a number of ways - injury is an obvious cause; but lifestyle, mood and general disposition are others. For instance, anxiety and stress can translate into rounded, tense shoulders. Poor self-image can lead to a closed and guarded bearing. Long hours in transit or sitting at your computer can cause a bad posture to develop out of habit.

Posture is an integral part of a healthy functioning system. Eastern meditation techniques teach that a good posture facilitates the body's energy flows. Posture influences the functioning of muscles, ligaments, joints, organs and circulation, ultimately affecting the efficiency of the body's systems.

A couple in the middle of a messy divorce case find themselves in court battling over custody of little Johnny, their only child. In order to make a fair decision over the boys future, the Judge takes Johnny into his private chambers so that he can find out which of the parents the boy would prefer to live with.

"Well, Johnny" says the Judge, "Would you like to live with your Mother?"

"No" replied Johnny, "she hits me all the time"

"Well then," the Judge continues, "Would you like to live your your Father?"

"No" replied Johnny again, "He hits me all the time too!"

The Judge looks exasperated and says to the boy "Well Johnny, who would you like to live with?"

"I'd like to live with Philadelphia 76ers" the boy replied quickly.

"Why on earth would you want to live with the 76ers?" replied the now extremely puzzled Judge.

"Well" replied Johnny, "They never beat anyone"

Submit your own humor, and let our readers know how funny you can be. We obviously need the help. ;) (Family appropriate)

A poor posture puts strain on your muscular and skeletal systems, leading to aches and stiffness in the short run, and possibly contributing to Cumulative Trauma Disorder over the longer term (see: <http://www.sechrest.com/mmg/ctd/#introduction> for more on this topic).

The respiratory and digestive systems may be similarly affected. For instance, when you are hunched over your chest you are not able to use your full lung capacity. This reduces the depth of your breathing and the amount of oxygen circulating to the muscles and organs of your body. A poor supply of oxygen will lead to poor concentration and feelings of tiredness. Slouching forward can put pressure on the organs inside your abdominal cavity - particularly your intestines. This can lead to poor digestion and even constipation.

In the short-term improved posture can lead to:

- * increased energy,
- * improved self-esteem,
- * fewer muscular pains or skeletal injuries, and
- * greater benefits from your workout.

Over the longer-term you can discipline your muscles to hold a good posture without as much of a conscious effort.

Besides the personal health effects of a good posture - your body language communicates your disposition to the rest of the world. A lazy posture tells others that you are tired, bored or not up for the challenge. A square, upright, but relaxed (not military) bearing gives you a strong presence and builds others' confidence in you. This can have a self-reinforcing effect.

...or your money back.

MORE GOOD NEWS ON GREEN TEA:

Two new studies support recent findings that swallowing green tea either as a beverage or an extract is good for your health.

One study, published in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition, concludes green tea extract increases energy levels and fat oxidation in humans. The extract consists of concentrated compounds such as catechin-polyphenols, an antioxidant.

Did you hear about the 83 year old woman who talked herself out of a speeding ticket by telling the young officer that she had to get there before she forgot where she was going?

(Thx Nana Thuy)

The second study, published in the Journal of Nutrition, used cultures of human leukemia cells to establish that green tea protects cells from oxidative damage. Such injury often harms DNA, the genetic blueprints cells use to assemble every compound that makes up the body.

13 Ways to Never Get Cancer

Healthful lifestyle choices can dramatically lower your cancer risk.

Here's exactly what—and what not—to do.

By Richard Laliberte, Prevention

First, the good news: You probably won't get cancer. That is, if you have a healthy lifestyle. "As many as 70 percent of known causes of cancers are avoidable and related to lifestyle," says Thomas A. Sellers, PhD, associate director for cancer prevention and control at Moffitt Cancer Center in Tampa. Diet, exercise, and avoidance of tobacco products are, of course, your first line of defense, but recent research has uncovered many small, surprising ways you can weave even more disease prevention into your everyday life. Try these novel strategies and your risk could dwindle even more.

1. Filter Your Tap Water

You'll reduce your exposure to known or suspected carcinogens and hormone-disrupting chemicals. A new report from the President's Cancer Panel on how to reduce exposure to carcinogens suggests that home-filtered tap water is a safer bet than bottled water, whose quality often is not higher—and in some cases is worse—than that of municipal sources, according to a study by the Environmental Working Group. (Consumer Reports' top picks for faucet-mounted filters: Culligan, Pur Vertical, and the Brita OPFF-100.) Store water in stainless steel or glass to avoid chemical contaminants such as BPA that can leach from plastic bottles.

Bing: Cancer symptoms

2. Stop Topping Your Tank

So say the EPA and the President's Cancer Panel: Pumping one last squirt of gas into your car after the nozzle clicks off can spill fuel and foil the pump's vapor recovery system, designed to keep toxic chemicals such as cancer-causing benzene out of the air, where they can come in contact with your skin or get into your lungs.

3. Marinate Meat Before Grilling

Processed, charred, and well-done meats can contain cancer-causing heterocyclic amines, which form when meat is seared at high temperatures, and polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons, which get into food when it's charcoal broiled. "The recommendation to cut down on grilled meat has really solid scientific evidence behind it," says Cheryl Lyn

Walker, PhD, a professor of carcinogenesis at the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center. If you do grill, add rosemary and thyme to your favorite marinade and soak meat for at least an hour before cooking.

The antioxidant-rich spices can cut HCAs by as much as 87 percent, according to research at Kansas State University.

30 Ways to cancer-proof your life.

4. Caffeinate Every Day

Java lovers who drank 5 or more cups of caffeinated coffee a day had a 40 percent decreased risk of brain cancer, compared with people who drank the least in a 2010 British study. A 5-cup-a-day coffee habit reduces risks of cancers of the pharynx and mouth almost as much. Researchers credit the caffeine: Decaf had no comparable effect. But coffee was a more potent protector against these cancers than tea, which the British researchers said also offered protection against brain cancer.

5. Water Down Your Risks

Drinking plenty of water and other liquids may reduce the risk of bladder cancer by diluting the concentration of cancer-causing agents in urine and helping to flush them through the bladder faster. Drink at least 8 cups of liquid a day, suggests the American Cancer Society.

6. Load Up On Really Green Greens

Next time you're choosing salad fixings, reach for the darkest varieties. The chlorophyll that gives them their color is loaded with magnesium, which some large studies have found lowers the risk of colon cancer in women. "Magnesium affects signaling in cells, and without the right amount, cells may do things like divide and replicate when they shouldn't," says Walker. Just ½ cup of cooked spinach provides 75 mg of magnesium, 20 percent of the daily value.

7. Snack On Brazil Nuts

They're a stellar source of selenium, an antioxidant that lowers the risk of bladder cancer in women, according to research from Dartmouth Medical School. Other studies have found that people with high blood levels of selenium have lower rates of dying of lung and colorectal cancers.

Researchers think selenium not only protects cells from free radical damage but may enhance immune function and suppress formation of blood vessels that nourish tumors.

8. Burn Off This Breast Cancer Risk Factor

Moderate exercise such as brisk walking 2 hours a week cuts risk of breast cancer 18 percent. Regular workouts may lower your risks by helping you burn fat, which otherwise produces its own estrogen, a known contributor to cancer.

9. Ask Your Doc About Breast Density

Women whose mammograms have revealed breast density readings of 75

A guy walks into a D.C. restaurant, orders a drink, and asks the bartender if he'd like to hear a good Washington Redskins joke.

"Listen buddy," he growled. "See those 2 big guys on your left? They're both linemen on the Redskins football team. And that huge fellow on your right was a world-class wrestler at Howard University. That guy in the corner was the all-time leader in sacks. And I am the personal bodyguard to Donovan McNabb. Now, are you absolutely positive you want to go ahead and tell your joke here?"

"Nah, guess not," the man replied. "I wouldn't want to have to explain it 5 times."

percent or more have a cancer risk 4 to 5 times higher than that of women with low density scores, according to recent research. One theory is that denser breasts result from higher levels of estrogen—making exercise particularly important (see previous item). "Shrinking your body fat also changes growth factors, signaling proteins such as adipokines and hormones like insulin in ways that tend to turn off cancer-promoting processes in cells," Walker says.

10. Skip The Dry Cleaner

A solvent known as perc (short for perchloroethylene) that's used in traditional dry cleaning may cause liver and kidney cancers and leukemia, according to an EPA finding backed in early 2010 by the National Academies of Science. The main dangers are to workers who handle chemicals or treated clothes using older machines, although experts have not concluded that consumers are also at increased cancer risk. Less toxic alternatives: Hand-wash clothes with mild soap and air-dry them, spot cleaning if necessary with white vinegar.

11. Head Off Cell Phone Risks

Use your cell phone only for short calls or texts, or use a hands-free device that keeps the phone—and the radio frequency energy it emits—away from your head. The point is more to preempt any risk than to protect against a proven danger: Evidence that cell phones increase brain cancer risk is "neither consistent nor conclusive," says the President's Cancer Panel report. But a number of review studies suggest there's a link.

The most powerful cancer fighting foods you can eat.

12. Block The Sun With Color

Choosing your outdoor outfit wisely may help protect against skin cancer, say Spanish scientists. In their research, blue and red fabrics offered significantly better protection against the sun's UV rays than white and yellow ones did. Don't forget to put on a hat: Though melanoma can appear anywhere on the body, it's more common in areas the sun hits, and University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill researchers have found that people with melanomas on the scalp or neck die at almost twice the rate of people with the cancer on other areas of the body.

13. Eat Clean Foods

The President's Cancer Panel recommends buying meat free of antibiotics and added hormones, which are suspected of causing endocrine problems, including cancer. The report also advises that you purchase produce grown without pesticides or wash conventionally grown food thoroughly to remove residues. (The foods with the most pesticides: celery, peaches, strawberries, apples, and blueberries.) "At least 40 known carcinogens are found in pesticides and we should absolutely try to reduce exposure,"

A builder and a priest are out for a game of golf one afternoon. Unfortunately the builder wasn't very good at the game and every time he missed a shot would shout '$#%!, missed'.

The game went on and after several outbursts from the builder, the priest could hold his tongue no longer. "Don't swear like that" he told his friend, "or God will punish you". The builder apologized and the game continued.

As soon as he missed another shot the builder shouted "$#%!, missed." and continued to do this every time he missed a shot for the next three holes.

The priest was starting to get really angry by now and said "I must insist that you stop swearing this instant, otherwise God will hear you and punish you!"

Once again, his pleas made no difference as the builder missed an easy putt on the seventeenth green and shouted out "$#%!, missed". Immediately the heavens parted and a bolt of lightning flew from the sky, hitting the priest and killing him stone dead.

Suddenly, a booming voice was heard in the clouds, "$#%!, missed!"

Dental surgery may be linked to heart problems

By Zach Gottlieb

NEW YORK | Tue Oct 19, 2010 11:58am EDT

(Reuters Health) - For people who have dental surgery, the risk of heart attack and stroke may grow during the weeks following the procedure, British research suggests.

"This is the first sign of increased risk for heart attack or stroke after a dental procedure," co-author Dr. Francesco D'Aiuto, a dentist and researcher at University College London Eastman Dental Institute, told Reuters Health. "This is not to say that this will happen with every dental procedure, but we are saying we need to look more into it."

It's hard to know exactly what's going on, because the researchers didn't have access to information about the drugs patients were taking around the time of their surgery. If they cut down on certain medications, for instance, that alone could have upped their chances of suffering a heart attack or a stroke.

Still, because these conditions affect more than one million people in the U.S., the increased risk could be significant.

According to the study, heart attack and stroke occurred more often in the first four weeks after the operation than any other time during or after the recovery period.

The researchers tapped into Medicaid data provided by GlaxoSmithKline -- which makes drugs to treat heart disease and stroke -- on a group of U.S. Medicaid patients receiving dental work, including simple procedures like removing a tooth.

D'Aiuto explained that heart attack and stroke are linked to bacterial infections and inflammation after other invasive treatments, likely because inflammation can damage the walls of arteries and contribute to the formation of plaques that clog arteries.

The authors, writing in the Annals of Internal Medicine, said that this led them to wonder about the role of dental surgery as well.

They couldn't find a lot of suitable patients to test, however. The Medicaid claims database includes information for close to 10 million people, but there were only 1,150 people who had an invasive dental procedure and a heart attack or stroke in the 4-year period they focused on.

In that population, 40 cases of heart attack or stroke occurred in the first four weeks after dental work -- one and a half times the baseline rate.

Dr. Howard Weitz, a cardiologist at Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia and co-author of an editorial about the study, told Reuters Health that the study was not designed to determine if dental surgery causes heart problems, only to see if they are associated with each other.

He also said previous research shows that errors in recording information in a database like the Medicaid one are fairly common.

Even when it's correct, Medicaid information does not include the use of aspirin and other over-the-counter medications that help to prevent heart disease.

In some cases, doctors require patients to stop using aspirin in order to help prevent excessive bleeding during surgery. Weitz explained that cutting off aspirin could put some of these people at greater risk for heart attack or stroke later on.

Right now, he said there is not enough evidence to suggest people should start delaying dental procedures, which could potentially create other complications. Instead, people should speak with their doctors about their heart condition and let dentists know if they are at risk for a heart attack or stroke.

"This study could bring a lot of attention to dental procedures," said Weitz, "but I don't think people should look at this as a reason to be concerned."

Vitamin B12 tied to Alzheimer's

"It depends, " I replied. "What does it say on your shirt? "

He yelled back, "University of Oklahoma. "

Vitamin B12 may help protect against Alzheimer's disease.

The study suggests that seniors with more of the active part of the vitamin in their blood have a lower risk of developing the disease, which eats away at the minds of one in eight Americans aged 65 and older, according to the Alzheimer's Association.

However, the findings don't necessarily mean that taking B vitamin supplements will stave off mental decline.

Just last summer, for instance, a pair of studies deflated long-held hopes that B vitamins -- like B12 and folic acid -- would help patients who had suffered strokes or heart attack (see Reuters Health stories of June 22 and August 4, 2010).

"More research is needed before we can get a conclusion on the role of vitamin B12 supplements on neurodegenerative diseases such as Alzheimer's disease," said Dr. Babak Hooshmand from Karolinska Institutet in Stockholm, Sweden, whose findings appear in the journal Neurology.

But he added that many elderly people suffer from B12 deficiency, so the results could turn out to be important.

"Our findings indicate that vitamin B12 and related metabolites may have an important role in Alzheimer's disease," Hooshmand told Reuters Health by e-mail.

The researchers took blood samples from 271 Finnish seniors without dementia. At a second examination about seven years later, they found 17 (six percent) had developed Alzheimer's.

Those who did had higher levels of holotranscobalamin -- the active portion of vitamin B12 -- and lower levels of homocysteine, an amino acid tied to mental decline, stroke and heart disease. Folic acid was not linked to Alzheimer's.

B vitamins decrease homocysteine levels, and so have attracted a lot of attention as a potentially cheap and safe treatment. But it is unclear if they are just a sign of disease or have a causal role.

Neurologist Dr. Sudha Seshadri, of Boston University, said he wouldn't advise taking extra B vitamins unless a doctor had diagnosed signs of deficiency.

"Too much folate in the presence of B12 deficiency can be harmful," he told Reuters Health by e-mail.

However, he added, "A healthy diet with adequate B12 may still be useful in reducing risk despite the failure of initial clinical trials to show a benefit on cognition."

Vitamin B12 is found in a variety of foods, including dairy, eggs, fish and meat.

Collards and carrots may ward off breast cancer

By Lynne Peoples

NEW YORK | Thu Oct 21, 2010 3:19pm EDT

(Reuters Health) - Eating lots of carrots and cruciferous vegetables -- collard greens, cabbage, broccoli -- could reduce breast cancer risk, particularly an aggressive form common among African American women, suggests a large new study.

The researchers looking at data from the ongoing Black Women's Health Study did not find a similar benefit from fruit intake.

Previous studies of the relationship between fruit and vegetable consumption and breast cancer in white women have led to conflicting results, and no prior research has investigated this link separately among African American women, lead researcher Dr. Deborah A. Boggs, of Boston University, told Reuters Health in an e-mail.

Boggs noted her team's earlier work showing that a so-called "prudent diet" high in vegetables, fruits, whole grains and fish led to a lower risk of estrogen receptor-negative breast cancers among African American women.

The ER-negative form of breast cancer, which is insensitive to the hormone estrogen, is more common in this population than among white women. It is also more difficult to treat and more often fatal than estrogen-sensitive cancers.

Overall, breast cancer is the second leading cancer-killer for both African American and white women, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Approximately 1 in 8 American women will develop the disease at some point in life, although age, heredity and environmental factors can increase an individual's risk.

Boggs and her colleagues wanted to find out whether fruits and vegetables drove the beneficial effect they saw in women eating the prudent diet and whether specific varieties are particularly protective.

They tracked the diets and health of more than 50,000 African American women from across the U.S. for 12 years. About 1,300 of the women developed new cases of breast cancer during that period, 35 percent of them ER-negative.

The researchers found, however, that women who ate at least two servings of vegetables a day had a 43 percent lower risk of ER-negative breast cancer compared with women who ate fewer than four servings of vegetables each week.

Further, they identified certain types of vegetables that appeared to reduce the risk of all types of breast cancer, including broccoli, collard greens, cabbage and carrots.

Women who ate three or more servings a week of carrots, for instance, had a 17 percent lower risk of developing breast cancer than women who ate carrots less than once a month.

The results for all vegetables held after accounting for other potential breast cancer risk factors, such as physical activity, smoking, alcohol consumption and education level, as well as consumption of other components of the prudent diet, the researchers report in the American Journal of Epidemiology.

Still, it is too early to determine if this is a true cause-and effect-relationship, they note. High vegetable consumption could mark a healthier lifestyle in general or some other unknown mechanism that accounts for the apparent protection. Vegetables' cancer-staving power needs to be confirmed in further studies, the researchers write.

"Most Americans do not meet the recommendation of five servings of vegetables per day, based on a 2,000-calorie diet, and African Americans in particular eat fewer vegetables on average than do whites," said Boggs.

"It is clear that, in addition to potential protective effects against breast cancer, higher vegetable consumption can lead to many health benefits, including lower risk of cardiovascular disease," she added. "Therefore, we recommend that African American women try to increase their daily intake of vegetables to meet the established guidelines."

Weavers Way #5 plastics recycling resumes

Fellow Recyclers, Weavers Way collection of #5 plastics, which are not included in the City's recycling program, will be on the 3rd Saturday of each month: The collections take place at the co-op's garage, at 542 Carpenter Lane,

which is across the street and a bit further down the block from the Big Blue Marble bookstore.

Please note that we need volunteers to keep this project going. (Weavers

The #5 category includes yogurt cups, sour cream containers, hummus

Impurities of any kind compromise the recycling process and usually lead to the discarding of an entire batch. Exclude any lids unless they are clearly marked #5. (Most lids from #5 containers are #4 plastic, but this is not always the case.)

We ask recyclers for a small donation to cover postage costs of mailing the recyclables to the Gimme 5 processing facility in New York.

Before bringing your #5s to the collection, be sure that they meet the requirements for Gimme 5:

PERSONAL AND HOME SECURITY

Being safe in the big city contributed by: Jessica B.

Let's be honest, crime doesn't just happen in the big city, it happens everywhere.

And being a single girl living in the city without a car, sometimes walking home after dark or bar time, you always have to be careful.

Friends and I have a strict system when we split from the group after dark.

We text one another when we get home, and make sure that if a street is dark, we walk down the middle of it (watching for cars) so we're always in a well-lit area. And of course, if we feel unsafe, just get in a cab and make sure the driver waits until you walk into your building.

Sage Advice from Children (Thanks, Tom)

This isn't a perfect system but it works for us.

Sleep in your clothes so you'll be dressed in the morning.

Stephanie, Age 8

In Chicago, I always thought that "incidents" were more likely to happen after bar time, because, well my judgment has been clouded in beer and...more beer. But while reading the RedEye last week, it turns out that the early hours of the morning aren't actually peak time for crime. The time with the highest amount of incidents is 9:00 – 10:00 p.m.

I re-read the story twice and I found that shocking and almost unnerving. The idea that I'm more vulnerable early in the evening really took me by surprise. So why is the Top Chef time such a hotbed for crime? According to the story, it says that people drink more in the evening and may reach an "optimal level of intoxication" early.

Hmm, drunk by 9 p.m.? Yes, I've been there but I still always feel more on guard when I'm leaving the bar, stumbling around, digging through my purse, giggling and making one last-ditch effort to make out with a guy.

But what I got overall from this article, always be on guard because there is no really "safe" time.

That means, being aware of your surroundings, walking in well-lit areas and not listening to your iPod or talking on the phone. Sadly though, I am guilty of these last two items on a regular basis. My boss even gave me pepper spray to carry around and I thought about taking a self defense class, but do they actually work in an emergency?

So do you have a system when you're out with your friends? This applies to even non-major city people. In Wisconsin I definitely wasn't safe when walking to my car. Fortunately (knock on wood) I've been lucky so far.

HIV/AIDS Prevention Workshop

Workshop Summary

Culturally-Relevant Communication about HIV/AIDS is an interactive and user-friendly workshop. Ivan J. Juzang, MEE President and Founder will examine the environmental influences, attitudes and behaviors and unique communication style of urban, ethnic and other hard-to-reach audiences; review theories and techniques for developing cost-effective and culturally-relevant communication strategies; and then show session attendees how to apply these learnings to their own HIV/AIDS testing programs, prevention services and outreach efforts.

Send your information to: News From The Coalition, Inc.

All entries for submission should be received by noon, the Monday prior to publish date and in Press Release form.

Learning Objectives

After attending the session, attendees will have the background necessary to more effectively communicate with their target audiences about sex, sexuality and HIV/AIDS. They will also have a clearer understanding of media consumption patterns and other social factors that impact sexual decision-making; and the attitudes, motivations and perceptions of minorities on healthy sexuality and HIV/AIDS prevention, testing and treatment. The Student Achievement Grants program provides grants of $5,000 each to improve the academic achievement of students by engaging in critical thinking and problem solving that deepen knowledge of standards-based subject matter. The work should also improve students' habits of inquiry, self-directed learning, and critical reflection. Proposals for work resulting in low-income and minority student success with honors, advanced placement, and other challenging curricula are particularly encouraged. Grant funds may be used for resource materials, supplies, equipment, transportation, software, and scholars-in-residence. SpotLight On Our Efforts

Please spread the word

Hosts for Hospitals is a little nonprofit that matches people with houses in West Philly who can volunteer a room for the family of a child hospitalized at CHOP or an adult at HUP or Presby. This way, they can stay nearby while their person is in the hospital--and otherwise they may not be able to afford to. This is a terrific organization, and believe me, they have thought of absolutely everything (can only accommodate one person? Check. Only want a visitor for two days or less? Check. Etc, etc.).

This is a great opportunity for both the host family (especially people who know what it's like to have a family member in the hospital) and the visitor---it often fosters lasting friendships. Some of the families are from other countries, so it's also sort of an international exchange program.

Here's their web site: <http://www.hostsforhospitals.org/website/get-involved>

Their office is at 4719 Pine Street.

Contact them at: 215.472.3801
or email Tammy at: hfhospitals@aol.com

They also need volunteers in their office, and folks to ride their bikes around the neighborhood to pin up flyers for them once a month.

A HAND UP!

"None of us has gotten where we are solely by pulling ourselves up from our own bootstraps. We got here because somebody bent down and helped us." - Thurgood Marshall

Hunger Coalition starts Adopt-A-Pantry project

Food pantries and soup kitchens feed more than 316,000 people in Philadelphia every year.

To support them, the Greater Philadelphia Coalition Against Hunger Coalition has initiated an online Adopt-A-Pantry program.

Visitors to the Coalition's site are offered an opportunity to read the stories behind area food pantries and soup kitchens and "adopt" it by making a recurring monthly donation to help the program buy food, paper goods, cooking utensils, kitchen equipment and other necessities. Donors can also make a one-time contribution. Donation is 100 percent tax-deductible.

Skip A Meal For Haiti

Most Americans eat at least three meals a day. Some eat more often. Millions of people in Haiti have not had a meal in one week and a good meal in recent memory. Will you skip a meal for the people of Haiti and send the money to a relief agency?

Will you not eat one meal, on one day so that they can eat for a week?

The cost of lunch at almost any affordable restaurant in America is between $5.00 and $14.00. Some restaurants have menus that serve four and five course dinners that can cost as much as $100.00 per person, not including beverages. For as little as two dollars a day, you can help provide food, drinking water and some sanitation supplies for a Haitian child or adult. A $14.00 contribution can help feed and hydrate a Haitian child for a week. We can all afford to make a difference!

The Black Star Project is asking you to miss at least one meal this week for the people of Haiti and to send the money that you would have spent on your breakfast, lunch or dinner to a relief fund that is on the ground working in Haiti.

Many people say they want to go to Haiti to help those affected by the earthquake. The cost of a round trip flight from New York City to Port-au-Prince, Haiti is more than $2,000.00. Decent hotel lodging, which is virtually impossible to find in Haiti, might cost another $2,000.00 for one week. And your mouth would become another mouth to feed of more than 2 million people who need food and water day.

Instead of going to Haiti, will you miss a lunch for Haiti and send the money you would have spent on that lunch to one of the on-the-ground relief agencies listed below:

The Black Star Project (773.285.9600) recommends that you send your contributions to:

Yele Haiti (Wyclef Jean's Relief Effort) at www.yele.org or text YELE to 501501 to donate $5.00 on your phone bill

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Q: Are these manufacturer coupons or coupons that I print on my

"Better to do something imperfectly than to do nothing flawlessly." - Robert H. Schuller computer?

A: All of our coupons are actual manufacturer coupons. Fewer and fewer retailers accept coupons that are printed from your computer because of a huge increase in counterfeit coupons. Actual manufacturer coupons which we issue are accepted everywhere that coupons are accepted.

Q: Can these coupons be doubled?

A: Yes. These are manufacturer issued coupons and may be doubled in any store that offers double coupons.

Q: What are the face values and the expiration dates of these coupons?

A: Being manufacturer coupons, the manufacturer determines the face values of the coupons. We currently stock coupons ranging in value from 40 cents to 5.00 dollars. The coupon expiration dates are generally valid for 90 days.

Q: How can I use $1,000.00 worth of coupons in 90 days?

A: With our program, you get to choose the coupons you want, when you want them. This way you never have to worry about the coupons expiring.

Q: How do I choose the coupons I want?

A: Each coupon book contains coupon request slips which you fill out and send in. Those coupons are then mailed to you.
